A Word from Our Corporate Platinum Sponsor

Paint Coating Maintenance Starts in Year One - The expected life of your paint coating is very dependent on how it is maintained. This should start from the first year.

There are a number of factors that impact how long you can expect a paint system to last; for example, weather, angle of surface, preparation, paint application technique, and colour - to name a few. But those factors aside, cleaning exterior paintwork on an annual basis is recommended to help maintain the fresh appearance of the paintwork and also prolong its lifespan. Areas that are not rain-washed (ie canopy areas & soffits etc) require particular attention as contaminants can remain permanently on the surface and accelerate issues without regular cleaning.

Look out for - Paint and substrate issues early on. Addressing them sooner rather than later in a maintenance programme will significantly prolong the life of a paint coating.
